Brief introduction of Chau Doc town and around:

An Giang is a province in Vietnam that borders Cambodia. It is most popular for being the place where one finds Chau Doc. The city is situated at the intersection of a tributary linking the Bassac and Mekong Rivers. A likeable little town with significant Chinese, Cham and Khmer communities, Chau Doc's cultural diversity – apparent in the mosques, temples, churches and nearby pilgrimage sites. Chau Doc is close to the river border of Vietnam and Cambodia. Anyone who travels to and from Phnom Penh by boat will pass by the city, and staying overnight is highly recommended.

Tra Su Forest & Wildlife Reserve

This sanctuary is located about 25 km from Chau Doc and covers an area of approximately 850 hectares. A wide variety of colourful birds and other animals can be found here: storks, bats, snakes and turtles ... Particularly interesting to watch are birds that can walk on water: because of their low body weight they do not fall through the densely grown floating habitats. The locals in this area built their houses with bamboo canes and fastened the roofs in trees. During the Vietnam War, the Tra Su forest Cajuput was a base of revolutionaries. From a high observation deck you will have a beautiful view over the mountains in the area, the expanses of mangrove forests and numerous birds.

Victoria Nui Sam Lodge ~ ideally located on the side of Sam Mountain which also famous as temple and pagoda clustered hill; this property features 26 stone bungalows and villas, is the perfect choice for guests looking for a fantastic view and a memorable stay. Guests can enjoy exploring stunning views of the surrounding temples, pagodas, valley filled with rice paddies, extensive ground which features vegetable and herb gardens; an amazing experience at the resort.
